How to Sell Your Business

Here's how to get the most of the transaction

Selling your business is one of the most important decisions you make as an entrepreneur. Whether you want to retire or move on to other challenges, the sale could be your largest-ever financial transaction.

Taking the right steps early on can help you maximize the sale price, minimize tax liabilities and other expenses, and achieve your other goals for the transaction.

"Selling a business is often not an easy decision for a business owner," says Mark Ohannessian, Director, Growth & Transition Capital at BDC. "It can be a bit like letting go of a family member. As a result, many business owners wait too long before making needed preparations."

Devesh Dwivedi, a Senior Business Advisor with BDC's Advisory Services, agrees: "Planning for the sale well in advance makes a big difference, whether your goal is to ensure a comfortable retirement, maintain the company's legacy, or even remain involved in the business somehow."

Added note from Industry Insiders:
A large number of sellers are realizing that the Canadian government is allowing 500,000 immigrants annually. They want to make Canada their home. Estimates indicate that up to 80% may be coming with large sums of money with interests in buying property and businesses, since most don't have employment set up. This shows retailers they need to locate and access the Realtors and Community leaders of those newcomers. They have the pools of resources to help find these interested people with their community connections. Think globally if you want to sell.
